

PROHIBITION TO BE A DEFINITE
CAMPAIGN ISSUE

Hoover Will Take Dry Side of Argument in Acceptance
Speech

IS A REAL ISSUE

Republican Prosperity And
Continued Efficiency Also Outstanding Issues

By William K. Hutchinson
(INS Staff Correspondent)

PALO ALTO, CAL., July 25.—Prohibition will be made a definite issue in the approaching presidential campaign with Herbert Hoover taking the dry side of the argument in his speech accepting the Republican nomination, it was learned here today on good authority.

The Republican nominee, who virtually has completed his speech, will come out strongly for enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and place himself on record as favoring a further test of prohibition. This will bring him into direct conflict with the known position of Governor Alfred E. Smith, his Democratic rival for the presidency.

Prohibition will become a real issue, one of his closest advisers said, because Hoover will not "pussyfoot" on the subject. His declaration on prohibition, it was said, will be far more emphatic than in his reply to the famous questionnaire of Senator William E. Borah, last spring, in which the nominee appeared to take a middle of the road attitude.

Hoover does not desire to make prohibition an issue, according to his advisers, the circumstances however, are such that he cannot avoid it. He will simply speak his mind, it was said, but by doing so he undoubtedly will create an issue that may dominate the campaign in the East.

The Republican nominee will make Republican prosperity and a continuance of Republican efficiency in Governmental affairs his outstanding issues. He will stress both beyond all other issue but the decision as of their importance naturally lies with the voters.

KIWANIS CLUB HONORS
MEMORY OF LATE MEMBER

Fitting Resolutions Directed
Sent to Widow of Eugene
Shuman

WAS WELL LIKED BY ALL

DOYLESTOWN, July 25.—Fitting resolutions were directed to be sent to the widow of the late Eugene Shuman, a charter member of the Kiwanis Club of Doylestown, at the weekly luncheon meeting of the club, at Brunner's Restaurant.

Several members of the club spoke a few words in behalf of the former councilman, who died last week at his home here. He was one of the first members of the board of directors of the club and one of his last statements made before his death was a wish for the continued welfare of Kiwanis in Doylestown.

Kiwanian Stace B. McEntee said that he had known Eugene Shuman for a number of years, and that one of the things that he heard a resident of town say, recently, about him, was: "Although he is retired and is not engaged in active business, he makes it a business to make friends. He tried to make a new friend every day."

"A man of fine character, and a loyal friend, and a man who, when he was asked to do a thing, did it thoroughly," was the gist of the comment made by Kiwanian Henry A. James concerning Mr. Shuman. "While in Borough Council, Eugene Shuman did a lot of excellent work and took an interest in it. He was not the type that could be heard from the house tops, but he will be missed."

M. S. Cogan, a friend for many years of Mr. Shuman, said that he never knew a more conscientious man. "In spiritual life he was a leader in the community and set an excellent example for younger men to follow."

President Hiram H. Keller said that Eugene Shuman typified the real spirit of Kiwanis, that he was a man that had nothing to gain by belonging to such an organization, but gave his 100 per cent. service to the community."

Mrs. Anna Sprecher, of Philadelphia, was a Sunday and Monday guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Levers, of 345 Harrison street.

Mrs. Joseph Parrell and son Joseph, Jr., of 1628 Trenton avenue, have returned to their home from a two months' visit in Somers Pt., N. J., at the home of Mrs. Parrell's parents.

REPUBLICAN WOMEN
PLAN HOOVER DAY

Pennsylvania Council Sets
September 11 as Date for State Observance

PLAN FOR COMPETITION

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—The Republican women of this State will observe Hoover Day on Tuesday, September 11.

On that date, set yesterday at the meeting of the officers and directors of the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women, the interest of 100,000 members of the organization will be rallied to the support of the Republican Presidential nominee, and their attention will be directed to days of registration and the November election. The discussion of plans for Hoover Day was led by Mrs. Barclay H. Warburton, chairman of the Pennsylvania Council, while other speakers headed by Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, predicted a sweeping victory for the Republican Party next fall.

Warburton House, at Twentieth and Sansom streets, where yesterday's meeting was held was besieged by scores of Republican women of the city seeking instructions for the Republican campaign. But the meeting was an executive one, and no one but officers and directors could be admitted. It was announced to those turned away that the 175 branches of the State Council of Women will compete for prizes to be awarded in the "get out the vote" competitions to be held throughout the State.

The branch council winning the most members between now and November will be awarded a silver cup, while the individual in the State who wins the most members for her branch will be awarded a special prize.

Another silver cup will go to the largest new council formed. Every member gained for the council means votes won for Herbert Hoover, Mrs. Warburton announced.

Mrs. Hannah M. Durham, chairman council, and former vice-chairman of the Republican State Committee, gave five reasons why the women of this State must forget factional differences in the coming election and give their combined strength to Hoover's election.

"Herbert Hoover appeals to a wider group of women than any other candidate for President since we have had the vote," Mrs. Durham declared. "We recognize in him as our Republican standard-bearer the kind of American citizen who responds to our finest senses, who challenges our untiring efforts, and who is capable of fulfilling the duties of the high office to which we are calling him."

"Charles Curtis is himself Presidential timber, and well-fitted to run with Herbert Hoover as the candidate for the Vice-Presidency. The women want as office-holders men who by experience and training are fitted for their position. Senator Curtis is capable of presiding over the Senate. He brings balance to the ticket by representing the Middle West. His is a colorful record of advancement and achievement."

"The job of the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women is to maintain and add to Pennsylvania's Republican majority. It is to give to Hoover all of Pennsylvania's Congressmen. It is to give David A. Reed the same majority we give Hoover. We must see that our State ticket is given a splendid complimentary vote."

Mrs. Durham emphasized the need of getting out the non-partisan vote and cited the fact that last year there were 122,615 non-partisan votes registered.

TULLYTOWN SCOUTS TO USE ISLAND FOR CAMP

Chas. Warner Sand Co. Gives
Use of Land to The Troop

WILL IMPROVE IT MUCH

TULLYTOWN, July 25.—Through the courtesy of the Charles Warner Sand Company the local troop of Boy Scouts of America is to have the use of Mooney Island in the Delaware, opposite Florence Heights, for a camp site.

Coupled with this generosity on the part of the Warner company is the service of carpenters who are now busily engaged in reconstructing a boat for transportation of the boys to and from the island. The lumber for the craft is being supplied by Lester B. Shoemaker.

Improvements at the island will commence at once. The plans call for the erection of a headquarters building, tents, council ring, and signal tower.

At the island the regular weekly troop meetings will be held, commencing next Saturday. Arrangements will be made for scouts desiring to stay overnight.

An ideal sandy bathing beach is one of the features at the new camping site. To insure safety regular Boy Scout camp rules will be strictly enforced under the supervision of Scoutmaster George W. Obermier. It is expected that the camp will be in readiness by this week-end.

Scoutmasters of troops in Bristol Council who desire to arrange for an overnight hike to camp Warner for their boys are invited to arrange a date by communicating to the scoutmaster of the Tullytown Troop.

Tullytown lads have been making fine records at Camp Buccoo, near Flemington, N. J. The Wolf Patrol, led by senior patrol leader John Wright, of Tullytown, captured the honors last week by scoring 57 points. The patrol is composed of the following: John Wright, William Obermier, of Tullytown; David Douglass, Doylestown; Verdon Watt, Albert Winterholden, of Bristol; Clarence Hisner, Hugh Balderson and Morris Slattenwait, of Newtown.

W. C. T. U. RE-ELECTS ALL
ITS PRESENT OFFICERS

Meeting Held Last Night At Residence of Miss Martha
Hughes

MAKE "GOBS" PILLOWS

Prayer for Divine guidance at the World's Conference to be held at Lausanne, Switzerland, July 26th to August 2nd, was offered at the meeting of the Bristol W. C. T. U., at the home of Miss Martha Hughes, last evening.

Following the prayer service the business session was conducted. Officers who have been serving were re-elected as follows: Miss Hughes, president; Miss Katherine Cabeen, honorary vice-president; Mrs. Harry Headley, vice-president; Miss Elizabeth Crichton, corresponding secretary; Miss Ella Mathias, recording secretary; Miss Jane Rogers, treasurer.

The Soldier and Sailor Department of the local union has completed two dozen Kapok pillows and 55 pillow cases to be sent to the League Island Hospital. It is thought that within a few weeks the group of members will make the trip and at the same time visit the Seaman's Institute.

NEW S. S. BUILDING
FOR PRESBYTERIAN
CHapel COMPLETED

Union Service Will Be Held
In It Next Sunday
Evening

DEDICATION LATER ON

Appropriate Exercises Being Planned for Early in The Fall

With the new Sunday School building adjoining the main edifice at Wood street and Lincoln avenue completed, the Presbyterian Chapel of Our Saviour will conduct the union service of the Bristol churches there on Sunday evening.

The new auditorium, which is to house the Sunday School classes and to be used for social activities, is a spacious room, with entrance on the Lincoln avenue side. The auditorium proper measures 40 by 41 feet, with an ample platform provided opposite the main entrance.

Those who had charge of plans for the building looked well into the future, evidently, for provisions were made for two class-rooms to be used as the school grows. These, each about 8 by 13 feet, are on either side of the platform, and may be used as dressing rooms when plays or entertainments are presented.

The size of the stage is 18 by 15 feet, and from this steps lead to the main floor. A kitchenette is built to the right side of the entrance, for the convenience of the women when providing for a public supper.

A lavatory, a small attic, a door leading from the new auditorium to the basement of the church proper, and an entrance into the main church, are other features.

The ceiling of the new structure is of metal, finished in a light buff shade. The color scheme throughout is buff and brown, making a most attractive finish. Six large windows provide ample sunlight and a plentiful supply of fresh air at all times.

Enhancing the exterior of the building is a neat iron fence, and between this and the structure have been placed blooming plants. At the main entrance there is an iron gate, storm door and swinging doors.

Although the union service will take place there this Sunday evening, and other services will follow in succession each Sunday, it is not planned to have the dedication ceremonies until sometime during the fall months. The Rev. Andrew George Sollis is pastor of the church, and he with the assistance of a number of the members, carried on much of the manual labor about the premises.

ST. ANN'S TIGHTENS ITS GRIP ON LEADERSHIP

Defeat A. O. H., Which Ties
Latter for Cellar Place
With Independents

FINAL SCORE WAS 3 TO 0

By T. M. Juno

St. Ann's tightened their grip on first place here last night by defeating the A. O. H. nine by the score of 3-0. The defeat placed the "Hiboes" in a tie with the Independents for the cellar position. Leedom's are now in second place.

Tullo served them for the "Saints" last night and was invincible. He allowed but two hits, one a scratch by D. Rodgers. Roe was his battery mate and caught a good game. It marked the first time that "Eddy" donned the mask and body protector this season.

Holden pitched good ball for the losers, but poor playing in the first inning caused three men to cross the platter and cause his defeat.

D. McDevitt made his debut with the leaders and played good ball. For the Hiboes the playing of D. Rodgers stood out.

The feature of the game was a wonderful catch by "Huby" Brady. In the fifth inning, O'Riola sent a short fly a few feet over second base, Brady was playing in deep and he came rushing in and caught the ball with his gloved hand and took three somersaults but held on to the ball.

The "Hiboes" were blanked in the opener. Thompson and McGinley rolled to Tulio. Margerum was thrown out by Paletta.

The champions scored three runs without a hit. Fields walked. Gilardi was hit by a pitched ball. O'Riola hit to Holden, who threw to get Fields but Fields beat the throw to third filling the sacks. Roe tapped in front of the plate. Holden fielded the ball and threw home but again Fields beat the ball, leaving the cossacks still filled. D. McDevitt hit to Holden, who threw wild to the plate, scoring Gilardi and O'Riola. Holden braced up and fanned Paletta, Seneca and Missera.

Three men reached first in the "Hiboes" second to no avail. McDevitt was out, Tulio to O'Riola. Rodgers singled and was caught off first, Tulio to O'Riola. Holden was hit by a pitched ball. Lake got a hit behind third and short. H. Brady struck out.

Tulio was Holden's fourth straight strike-out victim in the St. Ann's second. Fields grounded out. Gilardi beat out a hit to short. O'Riola rolled to Margerum.

The Hibernians again threatened in the third. McClaerty walked. Thompson was safe on Seneca's error, McClaerty going to third. McGinley hit to McDevitt and McClaerty was caught off third. Margerum fanned. E. McDevitt was hit by a pitched ball. Rodgers skied to Missera.

The outfielders got rid of the three "Saints" batters in their half. Roe flied to Rodgers. McDevitt flied to Brady. Paletta skied to Rodgers.

Tulio fanned the entire side in the fourth. Holden, Lake and Brady swung at third strikes.

Holden tightened up in the fourth. Seneca rolled to Holden. Missera's fly went to Rodgers. Tulio singled. Fields grounded out.

McClafferty struck out to begin the fifth. Thompson fouled to Roe. McDevitt.

TRUNK STOLEN OFF
STATION PLATFORM;
NO TRACE FOUND

Miss Marie Dunfee, Beauty
Expert, Left With But One Outfit

LOCAL POLICE NOTIFIED

Chief McGuckin Makes Careful Check-Up to Locate
Missing Article

A thief or thieves is believed to have stolen a baby wardrobe trunk from the westbound platform of the P. R. R. station here late Sunday night, according to the records of the P. R. R. Co. The theft of the trunk has been reported to the local police, who are making every effort to trace the missing article. Chief McGuckin is unable to fathom how a trunk could be removed from the station platform at 10.17 p. m., standard time, without someone seeing it being done. It might have been accomplished, however, due to the very poor lighting system at the P. R. R. station here, he claims. "Only about half of the lamp posts on the platform have globes in them," he states. There is no usher at the local station and gangs of boys create a disturbance almost nightly in and about the station. It was but a few months ago that a telephone box was ripped from the building occupied as a news agency.

The owner of the missing trunk, Miss Marie Dunfee, renowned beauty expert, is at the store of L. C. Wetling, 312 Mill street, where she has been advising the women of Bristol and vicinity and teaching them about Princess Mary Beauty Preparations.

Miss Dunfee left Philadelphia on Sunday evening on the train which arrives here at 8.35 p. m., daylight saving time. She got off the train but her trunk was not put off. It was carried through to Trenton and according to the railroad company shipped back to Bristol, arriving here at 10.17 the same night. The man employed as baggage agent here was busy when the 10.17 train arrived and did not meet the train.

J. J. Erbland, New York City, an extra brakeman who was working as baggage agent on the train that night, reports that he put the trunk off at the Bristol station. At this point all reports stop. No one apparently saw the trunk here.

It is described as being dark green with black trimmings. It contained several dresses, hats, several pairs of shoes and numerous other articles of wearing apparel valued in all at about $500. The trunk was made by Weary at Racine, Wisconsin.

Miss Dunfee is employed by the French Beauty Parlor, 3108 East 32nd Street, New York City.

The local police have questioned every individual known to have been in the vicinity of the station at the time, including all taxi drivers. Numerous residents along Garden street, who were upon their porches, have been asked to give information about the individuals they saw at or near the station during the hour mentioned.

It is said that Miss Dunfee will be reimbursed only to the extent of $100 by the P. R. R.

Warren P. Snyder At
Exchange Club Convention

Warren P. Snyder, principal of Bristol high school, was chosen to act as a delegate at the Exchange Club convention which is being held this week at Toledo, Ohio. Mr. Snyder left on Sunday.

The convention was officially opened Monday by "Miss Lindy" (Amelia Earhart). One of the most interesting features connected with the convention is that of an airplane trip to Detroit and Cleveland. The planes are very large and carry about twelve passengers and anyone attending the convention and desiring to see the other cities, may do so by taking this opportunity of the airplane ride—and still be able to attend all sessions of the convention. It is expected that Mr. Snyder will be among the many passengers to take this delightful trip.

ALTERING THE UNALTERABLE

One who as a youth several decades ago wrestled with English grammar and wondered why in the world anybody could see any use in such stuff, would be still more perplexed were he to look into modern text books after having given no particular attention to current works on the subject for two score years. In Harvey's Grammar, a standard for long, and on which more than one generation was schooled, three cases of nouns were enumerated, if we remember correctly. Nominative, Possessive, and Objective. A modern work wipes out the last two of these familiar designations and substitutes Dative and Accusative. Thus the language is Latinized.

It is revealed further that what once in some cases would have been called a pronoun is now an objective. What once would have been in the objective case as the object of a preposition understood is now the indirect object and therefore in the dative case. And these are but a few of the ways in which the terminology has been man-handled by grammarians. Also it is sufficient to reveal to what extent those who might use old and to them familiar terms would be "back numbers" in the estimation of this generation.

Grammar is one study in which none achieves too great knowledge. The best in practice mistreat it more or less. Yet, we had thought that the terms which once were so puzzling were as fixed and immutable as the principles of mathematics. To find the old names discarded and others substituted is disappointing. Of course, those who have studied Latin and Greek will at once recognize the source of the new names, but there are many who possess an excellent knowledge of English who have not wandered in the ancient tongues. Such, if of mature years, not to say aged, would be in a strange world if brought face to face with modern nomenclature after a lapse of years. And what is noted tells but a small part of the surprises with which one such may meet in perusing a modern text book.

A TIDAL WAVE OF CRIME

That the "crime wave" is not something that ebbs and flows but a tide that is rising higher and higher until it threatens the forces of law and order in the United States is a belief entertained by criminologists and many laymen. There is considerable food for thought in this idea.

The tide might be stemmed by discarding the old, worn-out artificialities of criminal pleading which can be traced to the days when punishment was much more severe, and when every device that ingenuity could contrive was used to protect society from inhuman penalties. Relics of those days remain in the cabalistic art of drawing indictments and in the hundreds of other technicalities with which the administration of justice is now surrounded.

The belief is widespread that the American people are confronted by a national peril which is growing graver every hour, and that, if public opinion is not sufficiently aroused to procure prompt relief and heroic remedy, the day will come when the regularly constituted machinery for the maintenance of law and order will break down altogether and the safety of life and property will depend upon voluntary defenders.

There are two forces to combat. The criminal must be met and conquered, and his allies be defeated and exterminated.

SYNOPSIS

Lovely Rose Shannon is innocently imprisoned on the charge of being connected with the Mercer Bank robbery. After a week she is released, but detectives trail her. She is met by Chuck White, member of a gang of crooks of which the Professor is leader. Pretending to be friend her, Chuck takes her to the Professor, who thinks Rose knows where the stolen money is. While a female member of the gang, dressed in Rose's castoff clothes, is throwing the detectives off the trail, Chuck takes Rose to the country. They stay in the cottage of a woman whom Rose believes to be Chuck's aunt.

CHAPTER XI—Continued

A warning cough from Molly told the two that she was still awake and not very far away. Chuck shot a quick, suspicious glance towards the woman, but her eyes were still half-closed and she still seemed to be gazing into the fire, lost to the world about her. Rose began strumming on the piano again, picking out fragments of tunes, old and new.

The tall clock on the mantel-piece, with the painted scene depicting a very red sun going down behind very green hills covering its swinging pendulum, chimed out ten lusty strokes. The tortoiseshell cat yawned; stretched out its paws; rose to its feet; arched its back and jumped down to the floor, mewing.

"Botheration!" Molly exclaimed, sitting up with a start. "That cat allus has to have its liver this time o' night." She rose and opened the door to the kitchen, calling to the animal rubbing against her ankles as she hurried out.

"Good night, Rose."

"Gee, sweetheart, I been waiting for this all evening," Chuck caught Rose in his arms, drawing her to her feet, and kissing her again and again. "Tell me you love me, kid," he whispered.

"I do love you, Chuck—so much." Rose's arms were about the boy's neck; her lips returning his caresses.

"Time for you young folks t' be in bed," Molly entered, a small lamp in her hand. "Good night." She kissed the girl's cheek.

"Good night, Aunt Molly," Rose returned the kiss and started towards the narrow stairs that led from the living room to the floor above. "Good night, Chuck."

"Good night, Rose," Chuck gave the girl's hand a final squeeze and stood watching her ascend the steps.

As the last footfall died away, Molly threw herself into a chair, her feet stretched out before her.

"Per Gawd's sake, gimme a fac, kid," she demanded, holding out her hand towards Chuck. "Jeez, I'm about all in." She took a cigarette from the package he offered her; reached into the pocket of her apron for a match and lit it, inhaling deeply. "This puttin' on this front ain't what it's cracked up to be."

Chuck leaned against the mantel-piece, lighting a cigarette. He made no answer to the woman's conversation and the two smoked for a while in silence.

"Say, listen," Molly began again. "Didja get anything 'outta the Jane yet?"

Chuck looked uneasily about the room. Then he turned and stared into the fire. "Nope," he answered finally.

"Well, listen t' me, big boy. You gotta work—an' work fast. This here's a strain on my nerves. I wanna tell you. We only rented this ranch for a month. Whatsa sense a mushin' around this Jane

"Aw, pipe down!" Chuck hurled his cigarette into the fire and stalked about the room, his hands thrust deep in his pockets.

"Well, you ain't gettin' nothin' out of it, stallin' around this way," Molly prodded. "Say, didja catch the wise one I almost pulled to-night when th' Jane's askin' if I wants her to play. I says: 'Sure, it reminds me of th' old days in Fr—' an' then I stops. I was gonna say: 'Frisco'."

"Say, she wouldn't know what you meant if you hadda," Chuck sniffed.

"Look heret! You ain't fallin' fer that dame, are ya?" Molly sat up in her chair, staring suspiciously at the boy.

"Certainly not!" Chuck retorted quickly—too quickly. He could feel Molly's eyes upon him, boring through him. "I tell you I'll get the dope," he insisted. "You just lay off an' tend to your end of the game an' I'll tend to mine."

"Aw! right. Gimme another fac." Somewhat mollified, the woman reached for another cigarette, lit it, and puffed contentedly and silently for a while. "Say, this a great front, ain't it?" she laughed, indicating her house dress and apron. "Can y' imagine me?"

Chuck shook his head, smiling. "Frisco Moll," in a glancing apron. The thought was enough to make anyone smile. "Frisco Moll," the woman with a reputation that stretched across the continent from California to New York, and across the years from the early nineteen hundreds to the present day.

"Well, I guess I'll hit the hay," he yawned.

"You an' me both, kid," Molly agreed. "I never was out on no domestic pattern. It shatters my nerves."

CHAPTER XII

It was a bright morning, with a mid-April sun warming the tall buildings, and a soft South wind gently settling awnings to flapping. People on the street moved just a little lazily as though their minds were not quite on work and the hustle and bustle of the city. Overcoats had been discarded for the time being; bright flowered hats and light spring clothes lent a new color to the drab stone and brick buildings.

Down around the Battery the harbor lay blue and gleaming in the sun, sending out glittering sparkles that dazzled the eye. Big steamers shone translucently with moving reflections, their red funnels sending up dark clouds of smoke that drifted lazily skyward. A tang of salt air; the musty, spicy sweetness of great, packed boxes; the mystic odor of wharves and warehouses, all intermingling, called alluringly of far off places, strange peoples, other lands.

In the midst of all these happy harbingers of the vernal season, two drooping figures walked wearily towards the Central Police Station. Simpson chewed thoughtfully on an unlighted cigar, his eyes on the ground. Cowles, his hands thrust into his pockets, his hat tilted sideways on his head, gazed straight before him.

"Well, here's where we get another bawling out," he sighed, as they turned up the steps of the Front Office and followed through the long corridor that led to Sergeant Cassidy's sanctum.

"Good morning, Sergeant," The two greeted their superior in dejected tones of voice.

"Well, anything new on that Mercer Bank case?" the Sergeant asked them coldly. This thing was getting on his nerves. Here three weeks had slipped by, and neither Simpson nor Cowles, his two best men, had been able to dig up one definite clew upon which to hang an arrest. To top it off, they had allowed the Shannon girl and Chuck White to slip from beneath their very fingers. And the gang at the antique shop were a bunch of frozen faces when it came to talking.

"Nothing new, Sergeant," Cowles shook his head.

"Now look here!" Cassidy's voice was rasping in its harshness. "You boys get out of here and get to work. I'll give you just about two more days on this case."

"All right, Chief!" The pair turned and strode out with as much bravado as they could muster under the circumstances.

"Well, what're we going to do?" Cowles looked nonplussed, turning to his companion for a suggestion.

"Let's go up to see this here joint Hawkins lives at," Simpson proposed. "I still got a hunch this here's an inside job, an' he was in th' cage with Daniels that night."

"It didn't do us any good seeing that janitor at Daniels' place," Cowles reminded him. "Besides, I don't think that Daniels or Hawkins, either one, had anything to do with this."

POLLYANNA

Politicians of course, know how to go from "mud" to "pie."

It is reported that a Bristol girl broke her engagement because her sheik stole a kiss. The trouble seems to have been that he didn't steal it from her.

The women have taught us the utility of putting off tomorrow the thing they can put off today. They have discovered that brevity is the soul of IT. They select their clothes for what they get out of them. Women's clothes, now-a-days uncover a multitude of shins. Women want but little here below and want that little short. She has curtailed her costume to the point where all she has left that she could leave off with modesty are the stickers on her windshield and the habit of smoking cigarettes. Think of the millions of poor worms that work hard all their lives and die before their time, that women may be partly clad with silk and men entirely with confusion.

The most successful way of getting around a woman is to hug her.

This was a better country when so many men didn't make a living organizing drives to get money out of other people.

Our idea of a good vacation is: Sitting on an ice cake in the Arctic and having people drop us food and cigarettes from airplanes.

"I remember away back when it was good style to cool your coffee or tea by pouring it out into a saucer." Shucks! That's nothing. We can remember when they cooled it by blowing on it, after it had been poured into the saucer.

A man may be clever, capable and agreeable, but if you cannot depend upon him you do not want him around.

In the good old days a woman could be lazy without having some specialist call her a neurotic.

HE LEARNED SOMETHING

The real estate agent is endeavoring to interest a fair prospect in a house of her own. "Why not," says he, "purchase a home?" "Home?" says she. "I'll say not. Why I couldn't use one. I was born in a hospital."

—July 26—

Southampton at Bethayres

Hulmeville at South Langhorne

TWILIGHT BITS

(By Thomas M. Juno)

Francis G. Ellis and John Boyle have a tough time trying to straighten out the schedule.

"Bill" Misera, of the "Saints," is the hard luck batter of the league.

Six times this season a pitched ball landed in his slats.

"Sammy" Lasprella is playing wonderful ball for the Independents.

"Monk" O'Riola went back to his old position, catching, the other night, and caught a good game.

On our roster's list: Fred Delaney.

Joseph Dougherty, of the Hibernians, is the quietest manager of the circuit.

The umpires, Joe Riola and John Elmer, are to be complimented on their work. Less squawks and more play seems to be the motto of these two boys.

On our roster's list: Fred Delaney.

Joseph Dougherty, of the Hibernians, is the quietest manager of the circuit.

THERE MAY NOT BE ANY FIGHT ON THURS. NIGHT

By Davis J. Walsh
(INS Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, July 25.—It would be passing strange, indeed, if, after all the pains I have taken with the situation, there would be no fight for the heavyweight championship of the world on Thursday night, but, if you think I'm turning comic in the matter, you ought to talk to Dudley Field Malone, the barrister, Dudley, or deady, if you insist, was said to have been around Madison Square Garden today intimating to Tex Rickard that such may prove to be the case and the only thing that served to give the young man a hearing is the understanding that he was speaking for the boy friend, brother Tunney himself.

The writer unfortunately cannot vouch for what Dudley said. He merely can tell you what he is said to have said, the authority for same being an official of the Garden corporation. The alleged statement, in effect, was that, if Rickard persisted in getting out his injunction restraining brother Tunney from flying hither to from Speculator on the morning of the fight, the boy friend would be so miffed, that he wouldn't come to Mr. Rickard's party at all.

Dudley has been brother Tunney's barrister, off and on, for several years. It was understanding that recently the connection in question was off because it was out, after the manner of a superfluous hair or something. But when he turned up to heckle Rickard over the week-end, the inference was that it was on again, for Dudley quickly declared himself as representing brother Tunney in the aerial or perhaps merely airy controversy now raging.

The status of the matter otherwise remained, as was, this morning.
